

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method for production planning in which a production planning sequence is subdivided into individual sequence steps. The individual steps are executed one after another and after each sequence step an evaluation is made of a result of the preceding sequence step. A system for performing the method, as well as a computer program and a computer program product are provided.

5